HISTORY OF THE DEPOT

The railroad in Bangor became a primary means of transportation for shipment in the 1870's. The depot was built to respond to the rise of railroad use. The Pere Marquette railway was used to transport a wide array of goods including hardwood timber, iron ore and the vast agricultural resources that the Bangor area had to offer.

As the depot began to show wear in the 1920's, a contractor was hired to raze the building and move it closer to the tracks. The renovations were completed in 1926. At this point, the depot was still put to use by tired rail workers looking for rest.

With the advent of larger semi-trucks in the 1940's came the decline of railway transport.

However, the tourist industry thrived in the area and continued to supply business for the railway. Tourists flocking toward the beach and resorts frequented the Bangor depot.

Eventually, during the 1960's, the introduction of interstate roads and the development of more efficient vehicle transport meant fewer tourists used trains to reach their destinations. The train station was closed down and fell into disrepair.

In the 1980's the building was used as a toy train factory but the company did not stay long. Again, the station sat unused and began to deteriorate. The depot was listed as one of the top ten most endangered train stations in America.

THE DEPOT AT PRESENT

The Bangor depot, after its renovation

In 2001, the City of Bangor purchased the depot from the CSX Railroad in hopes of restoring it and re-opening the Amtrak waiting area and offering the remainder of the building for commercial or office use in a step toward community revitalization.

The train station, located on Railroad St. in downtown Bangor, was nearly marked for demolition when the Ratzlaff family and several Bangor area groups and associations sought to restore the station to a condition that residents and visitors alike could view and enjoy. With the assistance of various city and state grants as well as private investments, the station received extensive restoration and was re-opened, new second story intact, on May 6th, 2005.

The train station currently houses various businesses and destination points. The lower half of the building holds the coffee shop, Beacon Specialized Living Services offices, as well as a waiting room for Amtrak passengers. The upper floor is utilized by Beacon Specialized Living Services for office space and is also home to the Edwin Foster Trophy collection. The collection, boasting an array of mounted African game, is available for public viewing from 9 until 5, Monday through Friday.
